

Agree or disagree: The government should spend more money on public works.

Since the end of the World War 2, Japan has developed greatly. However, we are now at the turning point with the problems of deterioration of public roads and buildings, the environment, and also unemployment.

The government needs to increase the budget on public works to resolve these problems.

Firstly, the government should spend on reconstruction of public facilities and infrastructure due to ageing of those. Catastrophes caused by aging constructions such as the collapse of tunnels have been happening around Japan in a couple of decades. The government should check those spots and start reconstruction immediately.

Secondly, spending on renewable energy generation facilities, such as _____, could improve the environment. 🗑️ not related to the topic

Reduction of CO2 and the use of clean energy should be promoted more. Japan should invest in projects to develop the systems as energy utilities cannot finance by themselves.
水力発電

Finally, spending on public works could reduce unemployment. Life expectancy has been longer and the people in their sixties are still counted as part of working force.

Hiring people who retired from their jobs for public works is more beneficial than providing retirement benefits. 🗑️ blunt! need to rewrite.

In conclusion, Japan should increase more budget on public works to raise our living standard and secure our lives. Using our tax effectively on those public works is advantageous for our future society.

1. Does the government do enough to solve unemployment rate?

No. Japan supports unemployments through providing subsidies. However, it doesn't become the fundamental solution. The authority should offer more job with training support for the job. For example, the Tokyo metropolitan government actually offers different kinds of training for them free of charge for one month.

2. How can we improve the environment?

The government should provide subsidies to build the facilities such as hydropower generation or geothermal power plants instead of the nuclear power plants. They would create clean energy. Eventually it improves the environment.
